Profile

Master's graduate in International Relations and Diplomatic Affairs from the University of Bologna, working in both academic research and freelance political writing. My research examines representative democracy, populism, and the transformation of political mediation, combining literature-based research with conceptual analysis. It has been developed through thesis research in Paris, conference papers, and published work, and I am applying for doctoral research in political theory and political science. As a freelance contributor, I write commentary and analysis on political and international affairs for non-specialist readers, and I am open to commissions for articles, reports, and editorial research.

Research interests
